

What is victim notification?

When information is provided to victims about the status of the accused (person charged with the crime) or offender (person convicted of the crime). The Victim Safety Unit provides information to victims when the accused or offender is supervised by B.C. Corrections. Some information may also be provided to persons protected by a Family Relations Act restraining order.

Who should register with the Victim Safety Unit?

- Victims of crime, and
- persons protected by a Family Relations Act restraining order who have significant safety concerns who want ongoing notification about the status of an adult accused/offender being supervised by B.C. Corrections.

When should I register?

You can register at any time, but it is best to do so as soon as B.C. Corrections is involved. For example, you can register if the accused is on bail and required to report to a bail supervisor, or if the accused is held in jail pending trial. You don't have to wait for a conviction. B.C. Corrections supervises adults in the community (bail, probation) and in custody (jail).

Do I have to register?

If you want to receive ongoing notification, you must register with the Victim Safety Unit. Otherwise, you will not receive automatic updates (except in cases of domestic violence). You do not have to be registered to phone the Victim Safety Unit and ask for specific information.

What information will I receive if I register?

That depends on whether you are a victim of crime or you are protected by a Family Relations Act restraining order. Different factors determine what information can be provided and when. The Victim Safety Unit will review this with you. The Victims of Crime Act sets out what information may be provided to victims, such as:

- whether the accused or offender is in jail
- when the accused or offender may get out of jail
- the name and location of the offender's probation officer
- whether the accused or offender is in the community and what conditions the accused or offender has to follow

Persons protected by a Family Relations Act restraining order may receive information about when the offender will be released from jail.

How will I be notified?

Notification may be provided by phone or mail, depending on your circumstances and preferences. If you wish, you may be notified through a third party such as a victim service worker.

What about cases of domestic violence?

B.C. Corrections has a mandate to provide notification to victims of domestic violence. However, victims may still want to register with the Victim Safety Unit.

What if the offender is in federal custody (sentence of two years or more)?

Call the National Parole Board, toll free at 1-888-999-8828.
